THE SITUATION.

S. T. Alexander Takes a Favorable View of It.

The arrival of Claus Spreckels and two or three leading sugar men in Honolulu has created a feeling of anxious inquiry in certain circles, and people are asking what the result of the new factor in the situation is going to be. Mr. Spreckels is credited with hankering after a Republic under an American Protectorate, as he looks on the labor question as the first one to be solved.

Mr. S. T. Alexander in conversation with an ADVERTISER representative yesterday expressed himself as well pleased with the situation in Honolulu. "The only thing," said Mr. Alexander, "is to hold together. The only danger to be apprehended is from division."

Mr. Alexander is a strong friend of annexation, as he maintains that the first thing to be obtained is good government. "First good government and then labor," is the watchword which he has adopted. He does not, however, apprehend any danger to the sugar industry, and thinks the labor question will find a satisfactory solution.

Mr. Alexander looks on the Japanese as an aggressive, restless people, and believes that they would not be slow to take an active part if the hand of the United States should be taken off for a moment.

In answer to an inquiry as to the state of things on Kauai, Mr. Alexander responded enthusiastically. Makaweli he found a wonderful plantation. "The cane is turning out marvellously, eight tons and more on an acre, and the system of railway tracks for transportation is perfect. The mill is grinding 75 or 80 tons, and Mr. Baldwin will work it up higher."

THE GAZETTE.

A Brief Summary of This Week's Contents.

The HAWAIIAN GAZETTE, the only recognized weekly newspaper published in the Hawaiian Islands, is out this morning and can be had at this office in wrappers ready for mailing. It is a twelve page edition and each page is crowded with interesting news regarding Honolulu and the other islands. A mail leaves for the United States to-morrow and a copy should be sent to your friends abroad. A brief summary of the contents is appended:

Mr. Thurston's letter to Antone Rosa.

Something of the career and characteristics of James H. Blount. Report of the meeting at the Cathedral which was called to consider the action of Bishop Willis. Able editorials on the political situation, and interesting correspondence.

Important Supreme Court decisions. Base ball schedule for the season of 1893.

The wants of the Portuguese colony as J. M. Vivas sees them. An excellent account of the production of the cantata at the Stone Church.

Report of the doings of the Women's Branch of the Hawaiian Patriotic League.

A letter from Chicago from a special correspondent.

The check episode at the Custom House.

The doings of the Councils, correspondence from the other islands, local news, etc., etc.

A Building Boom.

Already numerous American real estate speculators have found their way to Hawaii, in anticipation of that country being annexed. When annexation is finally accomplished the land of poi and decollette attire will undergo a building boom. This will create a demand for Pacific Northwest lumber. The demand will take away much common lumber now on hand.—Am. Ex.

GRAPE GROWING.

THOUSANDS OF BASKETS OF FRUIT SHIPPED EACH YEAR.

Chautauqua County's Grape Belt—Growth of the Industry and Its Satisfactory Prospects—A French Nobleman's Prophetic Forecast.

About fifty years ago, as the story is told by some of Chautauqua's older residents, a young French nobleman on a visit to America happened in the region of Chautauqua county. He became infatuated with the waters of Lake Erie, the beautiful hills that slope gently toward it from the receding country, and over which breezes saturated with the fragrance of Chautauqua's vegetation and imbued with the purities of Chautauqua lake gently pass. He claimed that this region was especially adapted for the raising of grapes, and prophesied that in the future it would be notable for that industry. At the time this statement was made it was not generally supposed that it would be demonstrated as it has been in the last ten or fifteen years, but that it would pass on and take its place among the scores of other prophetic remarks that had been made relative to the same subject.

The Chautauqua grape belt, as it has long been known, a strip of territory that extends along the shores of Lake Erie for about fifty miles, averaging in width from two to four miles. It has long been known as a fine fruit growing country, owing to the peculiar climatic and other natural advantages that it enjoys. It is constantly under the vigil of Lake Erie and under the protection of the hills that overlook it.

The broad, shallow basin of Lake Erie retains the heat that is collected during the long, hot summer until late in the fall, and the breezes that issue from it continually are moistened with its warmth, thereby preventing the frosts of early fall that have already killed the vegetation over the hills from depositing their destructive influence on the grape crop and allowing the vines to ripen their sweet juices. They also prevent fog and many other detrimental influences that are injurious to the fruit where still, damp days are prevalent. It is to this peculiarity that the grape industry owes its success. In the spring also the lake, with its crust of ice, distributes its cold breezes on the vines, and this retards the opening of the buds until all danger of frost is past. The soil also is another important factor in the successful growing of grapes.

The inhabitants of this belt were for a long time in ignorance of the superior facilities with which they were supplied. Small fields of grapes were set out, but owing to the absence of good care and sufficient attention they failed to reward the owners for their toil, and therefore they uprooted their vines and raised something else. They were not able to find which they could find a more ready market. There were among this number, however, some that were more persistent, and it is to these that the idea of grape growing in this locality owes its origin. They tried repeatedly to produce them, invented methods of cultivation, devoted time and attention to it, and their efforts were ultimately crowned with success. Their grapes began to be in demand, not only locally, but in all parts of the country.

At the present time there are about 16,000 acres of vineyards in bearing in this county, and between 4,000 and 5,000 more planted and growing. This immense increase in acreage is owing to the confidence that is placed in the product; three years' crop will entirely pay for the vineyard, including labor and land, and there is never a year when a vineyard of Concord will not yield a profitable crop. It is sincerely advanced by many men engaged in this industry that in the future every available piece of property in the grape region, except just sufficient to provide crops for the subsistence of the people, will be devoted to the culture of grapes, and that the whole line of vision from northeast to Silver Creek on any of the various railroads will be an almost unbroken expanse of vineyards, stretching out from the hills that border on Chautauqua lake to the blue waters of Lake Erie.

The larger number of vineyards consist of from five to ten acres, and are maintained more for the purpose of personal luxury and amusement than for financial results. Next to these are vineyards consisting of from twenty-five to thirty-five acres. On these whole families find occupation, and if properly cared for they will yield an income of from $1,200 to $1,800 annually. Above these are several vineyards of from fifty to 100 acres, the largest two in the county being those of R. J. Quale, of Silver Creek, and the Hammer grape company. They consist of 110 and 106 acres respectively. They are about a mile from Silver Creek and are within a short distance of each other. They present a beautiful spectacle with their long, straight rows stretching out for a mile on each side of the road, and one that cannot be realized by persons who have never seen it.

The time required for a vineyard to bear is three years, at the end of which time, if it has not been neglected, it will yield a fair amount of fruit; it increases until the seventh year, when, if it has been properly pruned and cultivated, it is said to be in full bearing. It is then in condition to bear, varying slightly with age, for fifty years. Thus it will be seen that there is no crop which responds more generously to the good care and careful attention of the farmer than the grape.—Cor. New York Times.

Told in Confidence.

"You know that story I told you about Harry and myself in confidence?"

"Yes."

"Well, it's all over town."

"I don't see how it ever got out. I only told ten or a dozen people."—Harper's Bazar.

Colorless, Emaciated, Helpless

A Complete Cure by HOOD'S

SARSAPARILLA.

This is from Mr. D. M. Jordan, a retired farmer, and one of the most respected citizens of Otsego Co., N. Y.

"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of the gravel, and have since been troubled with my gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk.

Liver and Kidneys

I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. I was badly emaciated and had no more color than a marble statue.

Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I thought I would try it. Before I had finished the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, suffered less, the inflammation of the bladder had subsided, the color began to return to my face, and I began to feel hungry. After I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat 5 times a day. I have now fully recovered, thanks to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I feel well and am well. All who know me marvel to see me so well." D. M. JORDAN.
